The Australian New Zealand Food Standards Code requires food to be labelled with these allergens and their products (cereals containing gluten, crustacea, egg, fish, milk, tree nuts, sesame seeds, peanut and soybeans) if they are included in the product formulation. VITAL (Voluntary Incidental Trace Allergen Labelling) has been used to identify any allergens unintentionally included in the product. The precautionary statement, "May be present", is used to declare the presence of cross contact allergens in products.

To the best of our knowledge, the details supplied in this form are true and correct. This information specifically applies to the product as manufactured.
